How to Create Statement Flowers:
Cut Apart

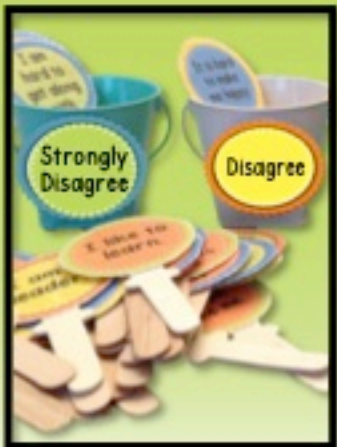

Glue to Popsicle Sticks

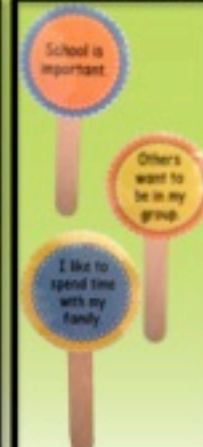

Use your imagination to create 6 sorting areas. I love these flower pails, tissue boxes, work great too!

Place labels on your 6 sorting areas to create ranking system.

Hours of Fun!!

Rules of the game

The Crafty Counselor

1. Chose the specific statement flowers your want to utilize with the student. Choices depend on the reasoning behind your time together and time restrictions.
2. Explain the system of ranking to the student. Make sure they understand the words agree and disagree and understand the differences between the six ranking areas.
3. Explain the "Flower Patch". This area is reserved for statement flowers the student isn't quite ready to deal with. We send those statement flowers back to the flower patch so they can have time to grow a bit more. If we're lucky, sometime soon the flower patch flowers will be ready to be ranked. Be prepared to explain words written on the statement flowers to students if necessary.
4. Once the student fully understands, have them pick a statement flowers one at the time and read the statement out loud. Have them think about how much they agree or disagree with the statement. Have them drop their statement into the appropriate flower pail (any designated container/space).

In the end you will know a whole lot more about what the child thinks and feels. When appropriate, revisit anything that surprised or worried you.
